FIRE DEPT. TO OPEN DRIVE FOR BACKER$

Fire Chief Ed Harrison of the Lakeside Fire Company announced this week that a fund-raising campaign will soon be under way to re-plenish the empty treasury of the volunteer organization.

Under the guiding hand of Chief Harrison, the local company has attained an enviable reputation among the thousands of volunteer units throughout the State.

The local alarm system consists of three telephone stations: at Harrison's residence, Caroll Ray's residence, who is assistant firechief and at Harirson's service station, where the equipment is housed.

A phone call, HI 3-1010, is immediately relayed by the telephone company to the local system. The efficiency and alertnes of the volunters in responding to local calls has been lauded by State officials.

Chief Harrison dispatches three units to every call: a recently acquired Ford truck, a tank, hose and ladder truck and a tank truck, which is used as a water supply for the other units throwing water on the blaze.

Chief Harrison and his volunter crew deserve the immediate response from Lakeside residents far and near, in appreciation for the time, risk involved and their courageous spirit on behalf of their fellow citizens.

Nature Talks

The flesh of the Bison is excelent and the hides are tough and durable. As the Bison was to the plains Indians, so is the Caribou to the Eskimo of that region. Food from the meat, fresh or frozen, cloths and tents from the hides, spears, fish hooks, sled runners and other implements from the bones and horns. With the coming of the aircraft and white men steadily pushing northward it is only natural to presume that these huge herds will be hunted more and more. Still the nature of the country proetcts them to a great extent and it will be many years before there will be noticeable decrease in the number of animals.

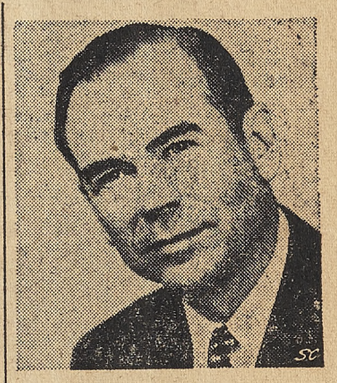
School Lunch Program Benefits Health Of Our Nation's Populace

DENVER, COLORADO — When Dr. William W. Stiles, Associate Professor of Public Health of the University of California at Berkeley, spoke to two hundred members of the American School Food Service Association recently he told them that the School Lunch Program is among the factors that is contributing to the increasing good health of our nation. His address was made to guests at a breakfast meeting given by the American Institute of Baking of Chicago, whose field staff members throughout the country work with the SFSA.

"The success of a given species," Dr. Stiles reminded his audience, "can be measured by its ability to maintain or increase its kind. Using this as a yardstick, we can claim that the human species has been mighty successful, for the population of the world has doubled every hundred years. It appears that we have been tremendously successful in these United States, for here the population has increased tenfold in the last century."

Population growth, explained by a favorable birth rate, a reduced death rate, an extension of life expectancy, and the sparing of lives from the ravages of infectious diseases, all are measures of our rapid progress in public health.

"We have been blessed," Dr. Stiles said, "by an era of bacteriology and epidemiology and their application to sanitary science... The science of nutrition has made its own contribution. Control of the infectious diseases and of nutritional disorders has had a profound effect on maternal and infant death rates."



Dr. William W. Stiles

Exactly how much the School Lunch Program has contributed to this increasd good health and welfare of the nation, it is difficult to say. But Dr. Stiles maintains that it cannot be denied that its contribution has been considerable. He commented on the high quality of enriched bread as an abundant source of thiamine, calcium, niacin, riboflavin and iron.

He feels that the Program helps considerably in the quest for good health. Great strides can be made, he states, by extending the Program into the remaining half of the schools that so far have neglected it. He pointed out one area of the Program which has the promise of rich returns — the area of health education, which is well recognized as a laboratory for such instruction.

He urged his listeners to take every advantage of the School Lunch Program to teach health education in the crusade for a longer and more abundant life.

Coach Locke Olson's fighten' five played their best game this year as they clashed head on with the invading Helix Highlanders and walloped them 50 to 46 in the league's most crucial cager battle to date.

Making all this posisble was lanky Lowel Raper, 6' 3" center for the Foothillers. Paper bagged 18 points, 11 of which he tipped through the rim in the first quarter of the game while pacing the hilltoppers to their fourth league win.

Although the Highlanders sported a team averaging 6' 4" the speedy Grossmont quintet proved that dynamite comes in small packages as they equalled the Helix five point for point through the first fourth of the game. At the end of the first quarter the hillers led by one slim point.

From here on in, however, that one point grew, and at the sound of the buzzer at the half that margin had widened to three. Curt Hardick hit the bucket from way out and Tom Jones Denny Ladd and Dick Williams began to find their hoop ranges.

The big quarter for the hilltoppers was the third, as rampaging Raper hit for 5 and Jones slipped in four. The rest of the points collected, 15 in all, came from Hawkeye Dick Williams and Denny Ladd. Duwayne Rudzinski found his range for the first time in the game as he sacked six of his 12 markers.

The Grossmont lead was threatened in the fourth quarter. Rudzinski continued to perform expertly on the floor as he did near the basket, riddling the board with six more crucial shots. But time and the rugged Grossmont five were against them and they just counldn't pour through enough shots to make the difference.

Tasty Treat—Low in Calories

If you have a cookie jar raiding "chubby" at your house, he will doubly thank you for setting out this tasty, refreshing low-calorie snack on these warm summer days.

A platter of these orange pecan cookies made with economic saccharin and accompanied by glasses of cold skim milk is just what the doctor ordered to take the edge off the pound-adding appetites of overweight youngsters. The non-caloric saccharin has another function: Dietitians say that we can help keep cool by keeping our body's fuel intake to a minimum.

Light and crisp, these cookies are easy to make and keep well in the refrigerator, ready for you to slice and bake in a jiffy for that unplanned visitor or quick dessert. Just 44 calories in each generous size cookie.

Orange Pecan Cookies

Dissolve	6 saccharin tablets (¼ grain each) in ¼ cup unsweetened orange juice
	1 tsp. vanilla
Cream in a 6-cup bowl . .	¼ cup shortening
Sift together	1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
	¼ tsp. salt
	¼ tsp. baking powder
Add sifted dry ingredients alternately with orange juice mixture.
Blend well into dough . .	1 tsp. grated orange rind
	2 Tbsp. pecans, finely chopped

Shape dough into a roll 2 inches thick and wrap in waxed paper. Chill in refrigerator until firm enough to slice, about 2 hours. Cut into ¼-inch slices and place on ungreased cookie pan. Bake on rack slightly above center in 400 (moderately hot) oven for 12 minutes. Makes 18

Your Home

By Frances Ainsworth

It's Christmas shopping time once again — for me, one of the most enjoyable times of the year. I'm choosing gifts for the home to give most of my friends — seems as if so many people are moving into new homes or buying older places and remodeling them that these home gifts will be most welcome of all.

One gift that I know will be appreciated is a new plate glass mirror — it's the touch that can add so much sparkle and friendliness to a room. The decorative tricks that can be achieved with mirrors are nothing short of magic. Nothing else can so effectively dress up a room — lighten it — or even expand it. And . . . because they are available ready to hang, just like pictures, it's one gift that most people will begin using right on Christmas day!

You can see that the mirror department in our store here has been a great help in my Christmas shopping. One thing, though—the salesman who helped me, cautioned me to get the best because it will last and last for years. He recommended mirrors of Pittsburgh Plate glass—and I'm glad I followed his suggestions for every one I chose was really beautiful!

For June and Joe — the young couple who've just moved into a new home, I selected a large oblong copper-backed mirror that will fit over their mantel; for my sister's home, I chose a big square mirror to fit into the alcove in the dining room — she's wanted to do something to make the room look larger —and I know this will do the trick. For my teen-aged niece, who has just re-done her bedroom, a large mirror to cover the entire wall over her frilly new dressing table is just the ticket for Christmas.

Grow Old Happily, Say Experts In Aging

Teaching the nation's aging population to enjoy the mature years as healthier, wiser and happier citizens, is the object of the new Foundation for Forty-Plus Living. The national organization has been formed for research, guidance, and development of authoritative information for older people, 20 million of whom will be over 65 by 1980.

The Foundation has launched a program with divisions specializing in physical and mental health, community activities, retirement planning, and vocational counseling.

More people now live more years

Geriatricians, the physicians specializing in the medical aspects of later years, have found the most prevalent problem to be malfunctioning of the intestinal tract—half their patients complain of constipation.

Doctors have for years warned patients of all ages against the violent purgative effects induced by cathartics. Dr. W. E. Aughinbaugh in a recently published review of the problem cited them as particularly dangerous for patients suffering the diseases common to age —heart trouble, high blood pressure, and hardening of the arteries. Dr. Aughinbaugh underscored

"I REMEMBER"

BY THE OLD TIMERS

From Maude Kendall, Hoovem, Ohio: I remember when I was just a barefoot little girl I would watch and wait for our old uncle to visit us. When I would see him coming, I'd always get his low chair for him to sit in the shade. Then he would tell us old stories we loved to hear. He would always have green leaves in his hat to keep his head cool. When he started back for home, I'd ask, "May I get the leaves for your hat?" He'd say, "Yes, Sissy." So I would run to the woods and gather leaves and fix them in his hat. One time I mixed in some poison ivy. He never came back for a long time and I never gathered any more leaves for his hat.

From Mrs. N. C. Henshaw, Pomona, Kans.: I remember when I was a little girl in Grant county, Kansas, only about 50 or 60 years ago. This being a hot political year, I am reminded of the red-hot politicians of those days. "Sockless Jerry" and "Prince Hal" and all the rest. The faithful came for miles and miles to hear them speak. There were hay-rack parades, flags and bunting, glee clubs and fiery oratory even as now, but without benefit of radio and television. Those were the good old days.

From William Agnew, Kansas City, Mo.: I remember when neither party would think its campaign was complete without a series of torchlight parades all over the land.

From Harvey Johnson, Cincinnati: I remember when we kids used to cut out windows in shoe boxes, put candles in the boxes, make several boxes into a train, and drag them along the street at night, playing they were lighted cars.

From Theodore Mastin, Lexington, Ky.: My mother used to buy some sort of pine tar extract, mix it with sugar and make pine tar syrup with which to treat us children for coughs and colds.

Streamlined Pork Chop

Lean trimmed pork cuts for today's slim, trim figures, are assured American consumers.

"Leaner, meatier pork cuts are in demand in accordance with the trend toward lower-calorie, high-protein diets," P. E. Petty, Swift & Company vice president said. He announced that to satisfy this demand, the company is producing carefully-trimmed pork loins for pork chops and roasts, as well as leaner hams and pork shoulders.

"The new lean look in pork will provide more protein and will give homemakers more lean meat servings per pound of pork," Petty added.

All pork packing plants have started producing fresh pork loins and shoulder butts with fat trimmed to 1/4 inch. This is the minimum fat covering for juicy, flavorful eating, leaving only enough fat to prevent a too-dry cooked product.

The trimming of the fresh pork cuts has its parallel in smoked cured meats, such as the "new look" in hams. The company is already marketing ham with a minimum of fat and with greater trimming of the skin on the shank. Skinless, shankless hams now offer the consumer even greater amounts of meat and little waste in the form of bone, skin and fat. Waste is further eliminated in a new, sleek style of Swift's Premium ham which is boneless, fat-trimmed and rolled.

This program is in line with agriculture's effort to develop a "meat-type" hog — a high meat producing animal, tailor-made for the present trend toward less fat and waste.

SOMETIMES Mother's sewing kit may be helpful in Dad's workshop.

For instance, if Dad needs a fine drill on short notice, he can make one from a sewing machine needle, according to American Builder. He should grind the needle head off as far as the center of the eye and then file each prong of the tiny fork slightly on the inside.

The pointed end of the needle he will put into the chuck. Since sewing machine needles are made of strong steel, they can be used for this purpose.

LAW IN ACTION

OUR CHILDREN AND THE LAW

Children are our greatest natural resource. And the law treats them as such. The law does much to make sure that children have a chance to grow up into healthy, educated adults. For as adults, they must carry on our government, industry, and business.

Under the law, a father has a duty to support his minor children, even though the parents are divorced, and either or both have married again.

For example, take John Smith. When he and his wife Susan were divorced, the court ordered John to pay Susan $100 each month to support their children.

John paid each month for a year. Then he heard that Susan had married again. So he quit. Officers arrested him on a charge of deserting his children, a crime punishable by imprisonment.

John protested to his lawyer that his former wife had married again. His children had a new father. So he no longer owed a duty to the children.

The lawyer told John he was still the children's father and he was responsible for their welfare, at least until the stepfather or some one else should adopt them, or until they became of age. But so long as Susan's second husband had not adopted the children, John had to pay to support them. The court could send him to jail for failing to obey the court order. Even without a court order, John could go to jail for neglecting his children.

Other reluctant fathers have learned that in 1951 the California Legislature adopted the Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act. It aims to enforce both the civil and criminal law relating to the support of children against fathers who leave the state.

These are only a few of the many things our law does to protect our children.

NOTE: The State Bar of California offers this column for your information so that you may know more about how to act under our laws.

THE Smithfield Herald, Smithfield, North Carolina, had this to say recently concerning a problem that has been uppermost in the minds of southerners since the Civil War:

"Most of us have seen with our own eyes evidence of the rapid economic progress of the South in recent years; on every hand are new factories, new chimneys, new industrial developments. But how many of us have realized that meantime the South has been suffering from a leakage in one of its greatest assets—its youth?

"It is an old story that ever since the aftermath of the Civil War laid a deadening hand on the South, it has had to export annually thousands of its young men to other parts of the country. North and West they go, looking for jobs, for a wider life, and above all, for richer opportunities. For a time after the turn of the century this exportation seemed to fall off. But census reports show that it is still being maintained in some volume. Even in North Carolina, where the level of economic well-being is being gradually raised, not a few counties, according to official reports, lost population during the last decade.

"Brains, talent, energy, originality, will always seek a market where they will enjoy the most scope. Our job is not to waste time finding fault with this natural tendency, but to learn the cause of the migration of youth and to apply the remedy.

"Here in North Carolina are we suffering from sloth, inertia, past-worship, outworn prejudices, or a crablike clinging to old and musty ways?

"If so, we may expect to see the outbound stream of youth continue to widen and swell. North Carolina is a tremendous producer of tobacco, textiles, and young people. If a blight struck the first two, the whole state would be aroused. Yet the third is the greatest asset of all. We spend much time worrying about Russia. But let us sweep off our own doorstep first."

Pointless Record

From The Eufaula Tribune, Eufaula, Alabama:

"That beautiful new super-liner, United States, just succeeded in getting across the ocean and back faster than any other passenger ship in history. She proved that we can now get across the Atlantic ocean in three days 10 hours and 40 minutes which is 14 hours faster than the Queen Mary made it on her record run many years back. The trip back, however, took somewhat longer but still established a record.

"Now that we know we can get across the Atlantic faster than ever before by boat, the question arises, why should we?"

The Lord Takes a Hand

Discuss Your Worries

MARUS ROBINSON, Princeton, Ind., was a flight dispatcher for an aviation company, and one of his duties was to prepare a daily listing of the aircraft available for fly-away, and teletype that listing to Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, at 3:30 P.M. precisely every working day. The air forces required a daily minimum listing of at least 14 aircraft at that time.

Carnegie

He worried about that time deadline before he even started on the job, and sure enough, the very first day he was in charge of the operation only 11 aircraft were available for listing. Moreover, he was not able to list the minimum quota any one day for the entire first week. By that time he was so worried he couldn't do anything right. He felt pretty sure that company was watching his performance closely and he was darned certain the army was watching even more closely. His greatest worry, however, was the fact that the planes were needed—badly needed—overseas!

In desperation, he asked his supervisor to call a meeting of all hangar superintendents and flight-line crew chiefs. He briefly explained to them the problems and bottle-necks which were being encountered and they had a round-table discussion concerning them right then and there.

The very next working day the listing was 16 planes, two over the quota, and for the remainder of the time he was on the job they never failed to make their minimum, barring accidents and unavoidable production delays, although the minimum listing was later increased.

Marus believes firmly that if you discuss your problems and worries with someone, for instance your doctor, your lawyer, your minister or your folks at home, in fact anyone who will listen to you, you will clarify your mind and your worries will diminish, often to the vanishing point.

A novel about the Great West

BY RENAN PREVOST

PREFACE

All thru the West there are Ghost Towns. Mostly in the region of the gold mines, of the wild, reckless days of 1849 and after. There are ruins of buildings and etc., which have a story, of the days,- of glory and easy wealth for some men; and dissappointment and tragic passing for other men.

About every city there are happenings of the past which are not always recorded; some men leave great names for their accomplishments, and land marks are named after them such as Parks, Streets and Schools. Also there are men, the workers who have "done the work" who are usually forgotten, with their passing on from this world. This story is about these men of great courage, supreme courage. Many of them arrived here without funds, and so gainful employment was necessary and that was work- hard work. Work not in line with their skill in a trade or profession.

Ghost towns have their story. So stories exist about buildings, water works, factories, railroads and other endeavors concerned with the earning of a livehood. These stories become interesting, because they portray a life during the days of the past,almost forgotten. Great buildings or public utilities are usually known by the name of the man or corporation which caused the construction. Very seldom is any credit given to an architect, or the men who actually did the work. These were the men-"the brains" who were responsible for the erection of the structure or etc. And so this novel is about those "brains" and how they came West and what their life was like.

There are certain things effecting the economic welfare of men, which cause them to migrate. Generally it is promise of better living conditions or opportunities of easy attainment of wealth, thru land booms, new agricultural crops such as rare fruits, a better livable climate,as an aid to regain health;or as in the case of the colonization of this great country- an escape from persecution or oppression.

Men have been traveling to the West for generations, so we travel West with our characters, starting in 1880.

CHAPTER TWELVE

The Story About Baja California.

A Foreigner's Speech About "This America."

"Well let me think, there was a rain fall of sixteen inches at Campo, in twenty-four hours, 1891, in one storm. However, in 1884, there was about nine inches, of one storm here in New Town. Yes, it can ran here, and when it does, better have plenty of fuel and food in the house, because when we do have a real rain, the whole terrain is soaked and there is no bottom to the land. I've known wagons get off the hard road and then immediately sink hub deep in the bottomless mess. Those poor horses cought in the mud were sometimes lost, the farmers were in a terrible condition. Weeks and weeks it took before they could work on the land."

"But it don't happen very often," demarked Twitcher.

"That is right, and even with the bad rain storms, this is the best place in the world to live, at least I think so, and we should be grateful that we do live here," added Mrs. Calfer, an old resident.

"Thanke you so much, and now I will be going." This was the method used by one Twitcher to get true information concerning this land of opportunity.

"Now, Anna, you do the buying and I will do the paying."

Anna purchased two chickens, olives, French pastry, asparagus and celery and an angel food cake, and a quart brick of ice cream. Frozen brick ice cream was a novelty then. When Anna had finished, Bill said, "Please wait here. I have to go up the street for something." He went to a candy store and purchased two one-pound boxes of fancy chocolates, which he concealed under his coat.

When he returned, he said, "Let us go home now."

They had the appearance of a married couple, going home after doing the weekly shopping.

When they were home, Bill slipped one of the boxes of chocolates to Jerry, gave a wink, then said, "Watch me."

"Anna," said Bill, "it gives me great pleasure to give you this box of candy."

"Oh, Bill! Thank you very much. My first box of candy, and I was wishing it would be from you. I could kiss you again. Thanks."

"Dora," said Jerry, "here is a box for you."

"Oh, thanks a lot, Jerry. You are so sweet."

That evening there was a family banquet at the Marcus home. The old gentleman was indeed happy, as it now appeared that his daughters were approaching matrimony.

"This occasion calls for a speech; so I call on our good Mr. Marcus," extended Bill.

"Why a speech from me?" asked Mr. Marcus.

"Because we want the honor of listening to you."

"What shall I talk about?" he asked.

"That is for you to decide." replied Bill.

"Well! This is a surprise, indeed, anyhow, well sure, I think that I can oblige you."

"I will not talk about of where I came from. Because I did not bring any excess bagage with me, or I should say we, didn't, when we immigrated to this Country. The baggage that I refer to is that which immigration officials cannot see or inspect. Some of it does not have visible presents or of material evidence. I refer to the customs, the language and the type of clothing of the old country. When we landed at Ellis Island, then and there the language of the old country was permanently abandomed, as far as conversation was concerned. I decided that we would speak in the language of our adopted Country, no matter how irregular, or crude our pronounciation might be, or how irregular the use of words might be; we would speak the english of the United States. We wanted to become good Americans soon as possible. When the children were in public school, their lessons were repeated each evening with me;- so you see I went to school, at home. We soon learned the language because we did not speak in any other. We studied the english language before coming here. It is true that I still read books printed in the language of the old country, but no one has heard me talk in that language, here. How different our patriotism is than, that of the many Mexicans who reside here. They have too much excess baggage.There is no doubt that we could open up a restaurant here and feature the foods of the old country, but that would revive memories of that land, and above all considerations we rather forget that place, and all its serious sometimes miserable conditions of life. Especially when a dear one's life had a tragic ending. Many of the Mexicans who come here, with excess bagage, would be far better off if they would do as I have done. I came to a new land, a land of opportunities, and a new life. The old land of poverty and all its implications is behind, forgotton. Now take these Mexicans, they come here, but they live apart mostly in a section by themselves. What is the reason? Inability to assimulate with other populations, or is it - - well maybe best that we leave it unanswered. Anna has learned the Spanish language when she was in high school. It is somewhat different than the lingo used by the Mexican people here-about. But she has become familiar with that so-called lingo, so that she can talk to the Mexicans in their own language. But she only speaks in that lingo when it is necessary in the business here. Our old country customs of food and dress, we have also abandomed. Notice about you every day this Mexican population here, notice the excess baggage. Look and you will see it every day. Now as to my old country-that subject might interest you, but I would rather talk about something that is grand, and maybe because you do not know of anything different you have failed to realize how fortunite you are.

"The subject is this great country that we call America, particularily, the United States. In this land you have 'free dom of thought'. no government of 'royal blood' to do the thinking for you. You can think as you please. Yes 'freedom of thought' is a grand heritage, you must always guard it. Never allow it to be taken away by a bureaucrat. Another freedom is 'freedom of religious worship', that is very important also your religion is your personnal business. No bureaucrat will specify what church you shall attend. Here church and State are separate. Always keep it that way. Those two freedoms were very sacred to the men who wrote the Constitution of this country. They were wise and learned men. They. or some of them knew the pain of suffering under religious intolerance of some of the countries across the blue sea, from whence they came, or their parents came, or their grand parents. History tells of much suffering of entire populations at the hands of tyrants. In this country the very thought is 'all are created equil'. We do not have a royal family, who extract tribute and support from the workers. No, we do not have a royal family and that is a blessing. All are created equil. You, me, and the man out there on the street. Also, here is freedom of enterprize. No person will tell you at what or how you shall work, or what business you shall be associated with. Freedom of enterprize, yes, that is very important. There is no compulsary military training, as in some countries across the blue sea. We do not have a click of 'war lords' in America. We are all entitled to 'life, liberty and happiness', and here in America is where it is found. Well, that is my speach." and Mr. Marcus sat down.

"Thanks, a lot, Mr Marcus," said Jerry. "I agree with you, and also admit that although I knew we had that freedom, of which you speak I had not given it much thought."

So the little get together ended for that evening.

Part Two

The next morning Mr. Marcus asked if Bill would go over on 16th St. and inquire if a Mr. Lavorodeux was employed. He had a large family, and was good at re-upholstering furniture, and some one was needed to do just that kind of work in the furniture store.

"Good day to you, Mr. Laverodeux," extended Bill.

"Yes, my friend, what is it you want?" was the answer by Mr. Laverodeux.

"Mr. Marcus wants some furniture repaired, and would like you to do it. Could you come today?"

"Yes, yes, I go now. Rosita," he said, upon turning into the house, "I go for little while, some work for me."

"Si, Si, Adios," was he wife's answer.

"You have a large family?" asked Bill.

"Yes, yes, Rosita and me have four boys and one girl. We happy, but sometimes don't have much to eat. Rosita, my wife, is smart, part Mexican and English woman, very smart and she loves me very much, very much."

Laverodeux worked several days re-upholstlering some furniture. He was a jolly fellow. Everybody like him.

"Tell me, Laverodeux," asked Mr. Marcus, "did you ever travel much in Mexico?"

"Yes, yes, I know Baja California like a book. Why do you ask?

"Oh, I am interested in how the people live," said Mr. Marcus.

"Yes, they live; the biggest crop is children, rejoined Laverodeux. "But they are happy; frijoles and enchalidoes for breakfast, enchalidoes and frijoles for dinner, and frijoles and enchalidoes for supper."

"One time I stopped at a lunch kitchen for dinner. I asked the Senora what kind of pie she had, expecting she didn't have any."

"She answered, 'Three kinds, open face, closed face and barred,' then she hesitated a few moments, then added, 'All apple.' "

"Are there any minerals down there?" inquired Mr. Marcus.

"Yes, yes, gold, silver, plenty silver, and some diamonds, so I have heard," allowed Laverodeux. "But the people don't need gold or diamonds. They need frijoles and corn and chilli for making tamales. Maybe a little burro meat or little cow meat; goat meat, that is good, too. Do you like tamales, my friend?"

"No, I can't say I do, because I have not had any, so I wouldn't know," allowed Mr. Marcus.

"You never had tamales?" asked Mr. Laverodeux. "So, I have Rosita make you some. How many live in your house?"

"There are five of us now."

"Domingo, you shall have tamales. I mean Sunday you shall have some. I send Juan over with five nice ones, Sunday."

"How do you prepare them? I mean what way do we eat them?" asked Mr. Marcus.

"They are made of corn, meat and chili, all is cooked in corn husk which is tied at the ends. You cut the string there, then eat the corn and center filling of meat and chilli sauce. My friend, that will warm you up plenty. Tamales, they is good. I will send them, ready to eat just at twelve o'clock, Domingo, I mean Sunday."

"That will be good, and now you can re-upholster that furniture over there. Where did you learn to do that kind of work?" asked Mr. Marcus.

"I learned in Quebec, when I was a boy, long time ago. I travelled plenty miles since then."

So for a few weeks the boyhood trade was again the source of a livelihood for the Laverodeux family.

Mr. Marcus inquired about Baja California.

"You ask me about people in Baja California. I will tell you something. The natives are Spanish, so they call themselves, but really they are mostly of Indian blood, which is very good for them. They can make a living, raise a family where the Castillian Spanish would starve. Me, I am French Canadian, so I see plenty, but don't talk much, but I make plenty of friends down there. I'll tell you a little secret of mine. Those Mexicans, not all of them, are sometimes like the Indians, their pride is easily hurt, so I be very careful what I say to them. They are a proud people, so keep that in mind, and you will be their friends, always. Let them do most of the talking. You can carry on a conversation with them by saying mostly just 'yes' or 'no.' If you sell them anything don't expect a high price for the goods. Their standard of living is so much lower than our's up here, that they must buy cheaply," so advised Laverodeux.

2nd ANNUAL PRESENTATION

SERAFINA

THE PLAY BY JEROME GERARD; MUSIC BY RENAN PREVOST

with additional numbers by
H. Adair Thomas

LOVE - INTRIGUE - COMEDY

A first rate tourist attraction must be original, entertaining, enjoyable and it must be seen only in one place Tourists travel the world over to see unusual attractions. "Serafina" and "Stars in the West" can be annual attractions for San Diego. There has never been anything offered in San Diego, to compare with the possibilties of these Historical Operettas, excepting, the two great Expositions -1915 and 1935, in our wonderful Balboa Park.

Why we offer these Operettas - The presentatio n of stage shows and etc., which have been produced for years, elsewhere, does not create prime tourist attractions of merit, for San Diego. Because as a rule tourists do not travel far to see stage shows, which can be seen at home or nearby. Or to hear music which is regularly used on the radio or on records for home playing. All of which; although, said shows and music are acceptable for amusement; but, they are in reality "common stuff" and seldom attract the well informed and enlight ened tourist, seeking the unusual.

.A tourist attaction of supreme merit is the Historical Operetta. And produced annually in a Civic Theatre located admist the fine buildings of Balboa Park, which is world famous and the center of culture of San Diego. We have the Russ Audit orium which will suffice until a Civic Theatre can be provided, We have the talent and the most enjoyable operetta — "SERAFINA"

These Operettas are new, with appeal unlike the over-played stage presentations of the past years.

So,- We offer these original Operettas, they can be tourist attractions unsurpassed; because they have not been produced elsewhere, most of the music has not been published, or offered for public use. Here are two historical Operettas, in all that it implies, about our San Diego.

The historical facts presented in the Operettas are such as has never heretofore been presented.

THE LONG LOOK

Palomar Observatory, one of the greatest scientific achievements in modern history, is located in San Diego's nearby back country. It is the home of the world's largest camera, which instrument will permit the moon to be photographed as if it were but 28 miles distant.

Ideal climatic conditions are essential to the successful operation of this observatory. After years of searching for a location offering clear atmosphereic conditions throughout the year, officials selected Palomar Mountain.

On the site also will be found two other observatories, one is a reflecting telescope situated atop Palomar Mountain 68 miles northeast of San Diego via Escondido and U. S. Highway 395. Turning east at Escondido, the road signs are clearly marked.

(Above) The second San Diego built on the flat land below the Presidio. It was on this site that San Diego first became a city, so designated by the State Leg-islature. It was here that the United States Government raised he American flag and took pos-sesion in 1846. The drawing was the first made of San Diego by an Army engineer in 1846.
